Curiosity alone is not enough for one to become a scientist. One also needs love of nature, enthusiasm, and passion of hard work. And power of imagination. one's parents must also be able to understand one's interest in science, and they must be stimulating and helpful they should make their children feel that they are the chosen children and at the same time, they should always encourage them to do better.

Science flourishes in an atmosphere of complete freedom and financial independence. Therefore, most of the high scientific achievements took place in either the ancient time or the Victorian age, the modern scientists like the author himself work on tenure basis or on grants. Therefore, sometimes, the visionaries are punished and sycophants are rewarded. As a result, most of them apply for funds to support less risky projects. Though the modern science has been immensely successful, due to the obsession with gadgetry of technology, a lot of research these days tends to be methodology and gadget driven rather than problem driven, so, present day scientific researches, unlike in the Victorian era have been extremely boring enterprises because of the lack of adventures. The early explorer and scientists like Alfred Russel Wallace, Charles Darwin, and Michael Faraday might have been much excited after their new finding. Today's generation of scientists lacks this excitement. Technology is, in fact, as helpful in the development of science as the idea. But a scientist's individual ability to perceive a new idea is also equally important. Unfortunately, the fields of scientific research is now dominated by the people who lack curiosity and innovative idea. They take research as a nine to five job. If you want to be a real scientist first, you should have the opportunity to do the free research in your interested field, and, second, you should work on your curiosity through your scientific research in your interested field, and, second, you should work on your curiosity through your scientific research. This helps you in becoming famous, at the same time, you can get a lot of fun and can influence others. Through your scientific research.

1. Read the following poem and do the activities given below.

Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening

Whose woods these are I think I know

His house is in the village though;

He will not see me stopping here

To watch his woods fill up with snow.

My little horse must think it queer

To stop without a farmhouse near

Between the woods and frozen lake

The darkest evening of the year.

He gives his harness bells a shake

To ask if there is some mistake.

The only other sound's the sweep

Of easy wind and downy flake.

The woods are lovely, dark and deep,

But I have promises to keep,

And miles to go before I sleep,

And miles to go before I sleep.

-Robert Frost

The first time I went to a disco I was very young and shy. However, I decided to go. Do you remember the Star Disco in Thamel? It was a lovely place..... always full of beautiful girls. Of course, most of them are grandmothers now! When I went to the disco, I was much too shy to ask anyone for a dance. So I sat down and thought I'd watch for a while. You know, see how the other lads did it. There was a lovely girl in a blue dress. A man walked up to her and said, "Excuse me. May I have the pleasure of the next dance?" She looked up at him and said "Eh? What did you say?" So he said, "I wonder if you would be kind enough to dance with me?.....er....if you don't mind?" "No, thank you very much." A few minutes later, this other chap arrived. He gave her this big smile and said, "Would you be so kind as to have the next dance with me?" "Pardon?" she said. "Would you mind having the next dance with me?" he said, a bit nervously this time, "No thanks."

Then, this third fellow came over. He was very good-looking, you know, black teeth, white hair- sorry, I mean white teeth, black hair! He said, ever so politely, "Can I...I mean...could I... no, might I have the next dance with you?" "Sorry", she said, "My feet are aching."

By now, I was terrified. I mean, she'd said 'no' to all of them! Then this fourth character thought he'd try. "Would you like to dance?" She looked straight at him. "No." Well, I decided to go home. I was wearing old jacket and trousers, and nobody would say that I was good-looking! Just as I was walking past her, she smiled. "Er... dance?" I asked. "Thank you very much," she replied. And that was that!

It's our twentieth wedding anniversary next week.

1. 4. Read the passage and do the activities that given below. 15

“Yogmaya had a two-pronged agenda, not just one,” explained Manamaya. “Her first target was the cultural and religious oppression of the time. Her second object was our ruler, the Prime Minister, who along with his generals allowed corruption and inequality to prevail. Our master, Shakti Yogmaya, showed us how these two evils are tangled, and she feared neither.” Yogamaya launched a brilliant and a daring political campaign from her base in the hills of East Nepal. It took place during the 1930s, and ended in 1940 with her death, along with sixty-eight of her followers who one by one followed her into the thundering current of the Arun River. After leading a campaign for reform and justice, Yogmaya finally confronted the ruler with an ultimatum: “If you do not grant us justice, we will die,” she declared. Juddha Shamsheer responded by sending his army to round up the protesters. The tragedy that resulted remains a stain on the government. The Nepalese authorities covered up the episode and banned all mention of her. Her campaign was thoroughly expunged from the nation’s historical record and almost lost to its political consciousness. But the powerful verses composed by Yogmaya, the hazurbani, survived.
